School Safety Agent Stomped by Teen, Had Eye Surgery

By CRYSTAL LEWIS Oct 23, 2017 Updated 17 hrs ago

GREGORY FLOYD: Five assaults since September.

A School Safety Agent had to receive emergency surgery after being assaulted by a 15-year-old student at Bronxwood Preparatory Academy Oct. 18, according to the Police Department.

School Safety Agent Landrea Davis stopped a teen girl from re-entering the school around 2:30 p.m. after she refused to go through a metal detector.

Stomping Damaged Eye

That's when the girl attacked the Safety Agent, kicking her and stomping on her face. Ms. Davis's eye was injured.

The student was arrested and Ms. Davis was taken to Albert Einstein Medical Center. She was then transferred to Montefiore Medical Center, where she is recovering from surgery.

According to Gregory Floyd, president of Teamsters Local 237, which represents School Safety Agents, there have been five assaults against Agents since the first day of school.

What DOE's Doing

"School Safety Agents play a vital role in ensuring the safety of school buildings," said Department of Education spokesperson Toya Holness. "We are working with the NYPD to ensure it is investigated and addressed, and we are providing the school with additional support."
